MINTS OF SPRING

We saw a little patch of blue, Yesterday-but yesterday-In a dark cloud, breaking through, Yesterday; It had spring's celestial dye; We were watching it on high-We, my little love and I, Yesterday.

Then we felt a drop of rain, Like a tear that fell in vain. Yesterday; But we knew well what it meant, For it had the April scent-

Pioneer, that earthward went, Yesterday. Then we felt a tiny breeze. Yesterday but yester lay

Not a tempest in the trees, Yesterday; Only one small breath of love, Like as if some brooding dove Fanned us as it flew above,

Yesterday. After that we listened long, Yesterday-but vesterday-Ay! we heard the brooklet's song, Yesterday; It was but a new-born cry.

Struggling from the ice-fields nigh, That we heard, my love and I, Yesterday. But it grew as on it sped, Yesterday-but yesterday-Tumbling o'er its rocky bed,

Yesterday; And it met the sun's warm ray, Coyly, as it burst away From the shadows cold and gray, Vesterday.

Then we heard a robin's note, Yesterday but yesterday-And we saw the white clouds float, Yesterday; And we found in fairy dells, Waking bees from wintry cells, Snowy cups and violet bells, Yesterday.

Ah! these were sweet winds of heaven, Yesterday-but vesterday-Heaven on earth to mortals given, Yesterday; It was spring's celestial dye; We were watching low and high-We, my little love and I,

Facts About the Washington Monte-

Speaking about the Washington monument "Carp" says in the Cleveland Leader: It has cost, all told considerably ever $1,000,000. The marble stones in it each cost about $75, and the most scientific piece of work about it was the putting in of a new foundation after it had reached the weight of 30,000 tons. It now weighs about 90,000 tons, and it is said that one end of it is sinking the very least bit. This is due to the fish pond which lies with-
